

ENDING THE CHICAGO CUBS CURSE – BRINGING BUNDESLIGA TITLE TO BERLIN CREATING GOLDEN BASEBALL MEMORIES IN BERLIN AND CHICAGO!

The Berlin Sluggers, the oldest registered Baseball club in Berlin, Germany, has joined forces with Huckleberry, a survivor of the summer of 69 and third generation Cub fan, to try and persuade the baseball gods to make the bad hops good hops and control the uncontrollable things that many times control the outcome of a baseball game and end the “curse of the Billy Goat for the Cubs.

The Sluggers have won over 25 championships at all levels of play from T-Ball, Little league, Youth Leagues, to Regional and 2nd Federal (Bundesliga) during the past 28 years, but have never won the First Bundesliga Championship.

Being located in the former East Germany, travel costs to West Germany create a major strain on the budget, and now the German Baseball Federation demands that lights be installed at the Baseball field as well as other improvements be carried out, thus making our task even more daunting. The city budget in Berlin is strained and baseball is no longer an Olympic sport, so financing for our baseball park must come from our own pockets, requiring even more sacrifice.

We will work and sacrifice to build our baseball stadium with the artificial lights so that Berliners can play at night and have a place to go and share in the glory of the game. We will dedicate our sacrifice and expenses to the forces of fate that control the bad bounces for the Cubs and maybe ole Huckleberry will not be another Cub fan who goes to his grave having never seen the Cubs win a championship..

The Sluggers and Huckleberry will keep promoting the good baseball spirit and creating golden memories on baseball diamonds. We will also be working on affiliations for student/athletes in Sweden, USA and Germany to allow them to study and play their sport outside of their own country, with the goal of working for a better global community through baseball.

We offer this work in hope of appeasing the curators of the curse that has been beating the Cubs since 1908.
